How is the name YHWH Pronounced

Almost 7,000 times in the English translations of the original Hebrew Texts the translators take out the Sacred name of our Creator YHWH and replace it with either the word God or Lord.

The Father tells us what his personal name is for all of eternity;

Exo 3:15 And Elohim said to Moses again, You shall say this to the sons of Israel, YHWH, the Elohim of your fathers, the Elohim of Abraham, the Elohim of Isaac, and the Elohim of Jacob, has sent me to you. This is My name forever, and this is My memorial from generation to generation.

The third commandment tells us “You shall not take the name of YHWH your Elohim in vain.” In vain means to change, falsify or to make common. A child could see that taking out the personal name of YHWH or in Hebrew, it is the letters Yod, Hey, Vav, Hey, almost 7,000 times and replacing it with a generic title of lord or god is definitely breaking the third commandment.

So our next question is how do we pronounce the name of YHWH? After the Babylonian captivity, the Rabbi’s felt this name to be to sacred to say and started to hide the phonetic pronunciation of the name YHWH. The Talmud tells us that they even wrote it incorrectly so that if someone was reading the name they would not accidentally pronounce it.

What they started to do was take the vowels from Adonia (Hebrew word translated as Lord) and mix it with the consonants for YHWH and come up with Jehovah. They only used Jehovah so no one could pronounce the name correctly. Very easily you could see that Jehovah would not be the correct pronunciation of the sacred name as there is no letter “J” in Hebrew language and in Hebrew the name” Hovah” comes from Strong’s Concordance # 1943 and means ruin or mischief. The name of our Heavenly Father is not ruin or mischief. Also Jehovah or Yehovah is grammatically impossible in the Hebrew language. Please refer to the many references at the end of this article.

Another wrong misconception on the pronunciation of the name of YHWH that has come up recently is Yahuah. In Hebrew a vav can be a consonant or a vowel but can not be both. So pronouncing YHWH as Yahuah you are using the vav first as a vowel and then by putting another vowel after it, it goes against the grammatical laws of Hebrew.

The argument for using Yahuah is because the name Yahudah (Hebrew for Judah) has the same letters as YHWH but adds a dalet. So some think to just remove the dalet, and that is how you pronounce YHWH. This is not the way the Hebrew language works and again goes against the grammatical laws of Hebrew. In Hebrew every word goes back to a 2 or 3 letter root, and then vowel pointed.

So although in English it may seem that YHWH is simply Yahudah without the dalet in Hebrew it does not even come from the same root. Check this out for yourself. In Strong’s concordance Yahudah is word number 3063 and comes from the root word 3034 Yadah, Yod, dalet, hay, where as the name Yahweh is Strong’s 3068 and comes from the root 1961 hayah or in Hebrew hey , vav, hey. So you can see they do not even have the same root and certainly would not apply a new rule of dropping the dalet and coming up with a new pronunciation.
Also the argument goes that since some names in Hebrew end with “Yahu” such as Eliyahu then Yahweh’s name must start as Yahu and then add another syllable “ah” at the end. Again, anyone who is thinking this way does not really understand Hebrew and Hebrew grammar.

There are quite a few references in scripture that refer to our Heavenly Father merely as “Yah”.

 Isa 12:2  Behold, Ei is my salvation! I will trust and not be afraid, for my strength and song is Yah Yahweh; yea, He has become my salvation.

 Psa 118:14  Yah is my strength and my song

In the Aramaic Peshitta, which is the oldest New Testament writing, it has the form MarYah for YHWH, in its Tanach, almost 7,000 times. Mar Yah simply means Master Yah. Yahweh is a family name consisting of Yah Yahweh the Father and Yahshua Yahweh the Son. There is absolutely no question that the Father’s shortened name is Yah. Even Halleluyah, which means praise Yah uses His shortened name Yah. So nowhere in scripture does it ever have our Heavenly Father’s name in the Hebrew as Yahu.

So where does the name Yahu come from in certain names such as Eliyahu? In Hebrew pronouns are added into the verb conjugation and Yahu simply means “He is Yah” Just like if you were going to say our “Elohim” in Hebrew, instead of using the pronoun our with the noun Elohim, you would simply say Elohenu, which is our Elohim. So having Yahoo at the end of a name proves nothing and certainly would not justify a Yahuah pronunciation, as not even all names have this ending, such as Nehemyah, which simply has the correct shortened name of Yah.

So with the Yah part being 100% confirmed we can also go back to the second century historian Origen and see that he clearly pronounced the second syllable as “weh”, again dogmatically proving from History that Yahweh was the pronunciation in the first and second century by Jews and Christians alike. Early Christian writers, such as Clement of Alexandria in the 2nd century, had used a form like Yahweh, and this pronunciation of the Tetragrammaton was never really lost.

Theodoret of Cyprus (5th Century AD) said the Samaritans of his time spoke the sacred name clearly as Yahweh. I believe that from historical and archeological evidence, the closest that comes to pronouncing the Sacred name of YHWH is phonetically pronounced as YAHWEH.

In 1898 A.H. Sayce transliterated 3 cuneiform tablets dating back to the time of Hamurrabi that clearly said “Yahweh is Elohim”. (see Haley’s bible handbook pg 62)

Also, in the Lachish letters that have been found in 1938 and date back to the 6th century B.C., and are the oldest Hebrew writing with the sacred name on record, again clearly prove that the sacred name was pronounced Yahweh. What is also very interesting about the Lachish letters is not only the fact that they are written in ancient Paleo-Hebrew, but that they are also vowel pointed, something that is very rare for a document that ancient, and the vowel pointing clearly shows the pronunciation of YHWH as YAHWEH.

After this, the Masoretes worked to reproduce the original text of the Hebrew Bible from about the 6th to the 10th century AD, and replaced the vowels of the name YHWH with the vowel signs of the Hebrew words Adonai, or Elohim. Thus, the artificial name Jehovah (YehoWaH) (emphasis ours, ed.) came into being. Although Christian scholars after the Renaissance and Reformation periods used the term Jehovah for YHWH, in the 19th and 20th century’s, biblical scholars again began to use the true form Yahweh.

Also, Josephus stated that the pronunciation of YHWH is phonetically spoken like 4 vowels. EE  AHH OOOH  AAA.  (EE + AHH = Yah,)  (OOH + AAA = weh.) So when you phonetically pronounce the 4 letters together they sound like Yahweh.
According to the Rabbi’s who purposely write the name incorrectly so not to be accidentally spoken, they would only say the name once a year on the day of atonement and this only by the High Priest who would go into the Temple, but later it was sanctioned by the Rabbi’s that the name could be said by all Jews but again only once a year and this only at sunset at the ending of Atonement. Out of curiously I went to the Walling Wall where this is done as atonement was ending and I clearly heard the pronunciation of YHWH as Yahweh over and over for about 5 minutes.

Some have mistakenly tried to connect the name of Yahweh to the false god Jupiter because Jupiter was also called IOUE which can phonetically be pronounced Yahweh. It should be noted that ancient pagans had many gods and were not shy in accepting any new concept of deity as a god. This is one of the reasons that the Romans persecuted the Jews so heavily, because only the nation of Israel had a concept of a single deity. They were looked at as poor and weak because they only worshiped one deity. This is why the goddess Istar is also called Semeramis and Diana and Athena or Aphrodite. Now, none of these names phonetically sound alike and none are transliterations of the other name. It was just the common practice of pagan cultures to accept any new god and call him or her by the name of one of their old gods.

So, could pagan cultures when they saw the power of Yahweh, have used his name and called him also by the name of their other pagan deities? Logic and history tells us yes, they did. Does that change the name of Yahweh? Logic and history and archeology tell us emphatically, NO! The way we know that our creators name is phonetically pronounced Yahweh is by the fact that Israel only had one deity and every credible scholar and every historical, and biblical, and archeological evidence distinctly points to the pronunciation of the only true deity, the Elohim of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob as YAHWEH.

I will close this article with the following references that dogmatically show the Creator’s name to be Yahweh. On the other hand I have yet to ever find any biblical, archaeological, or historical proof that would back up either a Jehovah or Yahuah pronunciation

Webster’s Collegiate Dictionary:
“Jehovah — False reading of the Hebrew YAHWEH.”

Encyclopedia Americana:
“Jehovah — erroneous form of the name of the God of Israel.”
(Encyclopedia Americana, vol. 16., 1972 ed.)

Encyclopedia Britannica:
“The Masoretes who from the 6th to the 10th century worked to reproduce the original text of the Hebrew Bible replaced the vowels of the name YHWH with the vowel signs of Adonai or Elohim. Thus the artificial name Jehovah came into being.”

The Jewish Encyclopedia:
“Jehovah — a mispronunciation of the Hebrew YaHWeH the name of God. The pronunciation of Jehovah is grammatically impossible.”

The New Jewish Encyclopedia:
“It is clear that the word Jehovah is an artificial composite.”

Encyclopedia Judaica:

According to the Encyclopedia Judaica, p. 680, vol. 7, “the true pronunciation of the tetragrammaton, YHWH, was never lost. The name was pronounced Yahweh. It was regularly pronounced this way at least until 586 B.C., as is clear from the Lachish Letters written shortly before this date.”

"The true pronunciation of the name YHWH was never lost. Several early Greek writers of the Christian Church testify that the name was pronounced 'Yahweh.'”

 Isa 42:8  I am YAHWEH; that is My name; and I will not give My glory to another, nor My praise to engraved images.
